Our Background & Expertise

Currently, we are conducting revolutionary research into chronic disease. Federal funding for these programs is utilized to develop novel diagnostic tests for challenging and rare diseases. Over the past decade, Ethos has been dedicated to developing diagnostic tools to combat the opioid epidemic. Our research efforts have culminated in the development and validation of the world's first biochemical pain index that allows physicians to identify underlying causes of chronic pain, which can be treated with non-opioid therapies. Our innovative and strategic approaches to providing high-impact solutions were also applied to the development of our COVID-19 testing program during the early stages of the pandemic.
